HONGRONG, JULY 21st, 1870.

Ir can scarcely be believed that the French nation-will hesitate for a single moment as to the course which she is called upon to adopt with respect to the Tientsin Massacre As has been shown in the articles which have been given in previous issues and are reproduced to day for the perusal of home readers, indirect complicity of those at the capital. every effort will be made by the Chinese and their supporters to exculpate Onun How and doubt upon the subject. It is this. If even, by plausible misrepresentation, it may be made to appear that the Imperial Government were not directly concerned in the rising, it of the grossest negligence; and negligence, distinguished from complicity: Sir ROUNDELL PALMEN's dictum with regard to the Greek Massacres, that a Government, by admitting the subjects of other nations to its dominions must be impliedly held responsible for their protection, is conclusive on the point. The Central Government have not been guilty merely of incapacity, but, as there is very strong reason to believe, of indirect complicity, and there is no doubt, of unpardonable neglect. The last is sufficient to make them responsible, even if by plausible argument, they should in a measure be able to exculpate themselves from complicity, which, however, seems almost impossible.

Under these circumstances, it is hardly to be doubted that the French Government will take the matter up with vigour, and that in doing so, it will be supported by the unanimous voice of a justly incensed people. How far other nations will co-operate, it is impossible to dovine. Russia, it is certain, will not allow the outrage on her subjects to pass, and will probably take the present opportunity of annexing further territory in the North England is less directly concerned though her honour has theen grievously assailed. One of the sisters was a British subject, the daughter of a respected clergyman in Ireland, and English Missionaries were also threatened and, but for their beatamount of insult, England would formerly have been in the van in demanding redress. and it may perhaps be hoped that such an outrage on the whole civilized world, as the cold-blooded massacre at. Tientsin, may even now not be considered a matter in which she has no concern. Much of the responsibility for this sad occurrence rests with her. It was her weak policy that mainly encouraged the faction, which was at the bottom of the outbreak, to hope for success, and her neglect of warning after warning of the futal effects, to which her mistaken course was leading, has thus been the chief cause of the present troubles. Aslongago as January last year, this was palpable to every one in China, and at that time, in writing of the outbreak at Swatow and the hostile demonstrations made at Foochow, we used the following words:-"Can it be doubted, if such a catastrophe, openly expressed. According to one account on their way back they met the Che-heien, and Obung How's gave it out that the Consul fired at the Ohe-baien, whereupon the mob rose and cut him down, killing him on the spot: Another version of Chun How's statement was to the effect that the French Consul second him stoop! fired at him. A third is that he fired off his pistol in the Yamen. Chun How declared that the French Consul had been killed by his side, and that he had had Gensul: but this turned out to be a deliberate lie, the body of Mr. Fontanier having been picked up the evening before in the River, and identified by several of his friends, as well as from the mark on his socks. As will be seen by a subsequent account given below. Chun How's statement as to being threatened with a pistol in the Yamun is proved by direct testi-When the French Consul and the Chancelie had been despatched, at about two o'clock a rightful yell rose from the mob, now ten thou sand sirong, who were gathered round the Catholic Cathedral. The priest it charge, M. Oheverier, and M. Thomassin and wife just arrived from Shangbai, and a number of Uhinese were murdered and the building fired. The mob then rushed to the establishment of the Sisters of Charity, which is situated nearer to the British Settlement than the Cathedral, and the murderers went in to do their bloody work. The sistors, ten in number, were seized, their clothes dragged off them, their eyes scooped out, their breasts cut off and their bodies stabled and ripped open. The building burst into flame, and confusion and riot; were everywhere ram, pant. We do not propuse to add much in the way of remark. Our the people, who told him that there were provided in the wonder at your incredulity when duty, for the present at least, will have been discharged when we have thus recalled your attention to what we believe to be important

1. We beg to remind you that it was well known, for some days previous to the massacre. that there was a plot of some kind against foreigners; that although many of the injurious rumours relative to kidnapping, &c., were more particularly connected with French Romanists, the threats held out were by no means directed only against them; that a fortnight previous to the out-break, a lady member of one of the Protestant Missions was so much alarmed by the gentures and kinguage of the people, that awakened general alarm among the converts of all the Protestant Missions; that ou Friday the 17th, Mr. Lees (in the absence of his colleagues) had a long conversation with you upon the subject, and especially with reference to the bnoxious—proclamation—issued—by the Fut Magistrate, which well informed natives. even then, confidently predicted would lead to riots; that you advised Mr. Leas to lodge a complaint relative to this proclamation with you, and also to apply for a counter proclamation as a measure of precaution, in case the public excitement should not abate; that the very same day i was found that threats had been uttered with reference to the new hospital premises just purchased by the London Mission, and that it was not possible to find workmen courageous enough to undertake the meeded repairs; that Mr. Less accordingly applied for the protective proclamation, as before agreed upon, on Saturday evening the 18th; that offensive demonstrations were made at the East gute chapel, of the oudon Mission, on Sunday afternoon, the 19th the show being raised "They are killing a man in there," and a riot was averted only by the cool self-posession and good temper of one or stones were taken up threateningly, as the Rev. Mr. Turnock, Mrs. Turnock, and a friend, were. returning from a chapel east of the river; that Mr. Lees saw you again on the Monday to represent the extreme urgency of the case; and finally, that, on the Tuesday morning, we both waited upon you for the same purpose. having just received, from a number of our most trusted native assistants, renewed warnings of the imminences of the danger, and the necessity for immediate action. II - We beg to say that the facts brough out, in the evidence we have already had the fonour to place in your hands, prove that, whatever may now be said, the animosity of the noo, with tare ex- ptions, was far from being directed against the French alone.

This is shown— (1.) By the indiscriminate and consecutive destruction of all the Protestant chapels, eight in number, including the extensive premises of the American Board -this destruction being as complete as the bitterest rage could make i (2.) By the careful enquiry made for the Missionaries, both at the chapels and at the London Mission Hospital. (3.) By the ill treatment of many of our converts, all of whom seem to have been marked men, and to have been persecuted, beaten, and plandered accordingly; while no loss than 8 or lo of the more well-to-do among them have had their houses pulled down, and, been robbed of everything they possessed.

It is further shown-(4,) By the inutillity of the appeal made by the unfortunate Russian victims to the pity people, on the ground of English nationality; (5.) By the loudly expressed resolution of mob, after they had completed their borrid work at the hospital of the Sœurs de Charite, to come down to the Settlement and burn the honge. III. We dure not conceal our conviction that recognition, even if they have not had official authority.
